Now...are you confused by the name? Well, many members of this atheist community have been too. There had been made in the early (more sober) stages of the most recent Godless Pub Crawl a move to have women meet together who share a common nonbelief system. In the later (much less sober and more goofy) stages, there was a progressively more animated conversation about what to call the group. Many ideas were tossed about. Many were pounced upon and shredded. Some rose to the surface. This conversation resulted in the name The Dark Flow. For better or for worse, there it is. In case you’re still confused, the Dark Flow is a name given to a net motion of galaxy clusters with respect to the cosmic microwave background radiation. See <http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Dark_flow> or <http://www.livescience.com/space/080923-dark-flows.html>.

This is a group casually related to atheism and agnosticism (or humanitarianism, secularism, nontheism, and humanism) and women. This group is a special interest group of the Atheist Community of Austin, but it is self-managed. It is not intended to be a dating service for atheists although if it happens, that could be a good thing for some people. Specifically, what it is NOT is a male bashing group. It is also NOT designed to promote any negative atheism. This group is designed as an opportunity to have women of a wide variety of ages, careers, and lifestyle choices come together and do some fun social stuff, in addition to having intelligent—and maybe not so intelligent—conversations over food and drink. Who knows? There may even be more lively conversation about the name!

The Dark Flow Women’s Group has been meeting now for a couple of months and is going strong! We have met four times over the past 2 months. This group meets on the third Tuesday evening and the first Saturday evening of the month. Tuesday evening is more like a happy hour time where we meet at a coffee shop around 6 p.m. Saturday evening has become more like an evening out and starts around 5:30 p.m. to give people time to get together before they go out for the evening. We have considered extending out the Saturday evening meet up to later evening activities like dancing and/or taking in one of the local downtown clubs. We welcome any ideas of those who are just dying to get out and expand their social horizons.

We would like to extend this network for developing a monthly movie night, playing some controversial movies, such as Dildo Diaries, Vagina Monologues, Why We Wax, Religious, or Letting Go of God. I personally would like to invite more women out there who are tired of feeling like you have to wait to get to do fun things until there is the “right time.”

New ACA Board Elected

—by Don Baker

The 2009-2010 ACA board was elected on May 3, 2009, during a special election meeting. Matt Dillahunty will keep his role as president. Jen Peeples will be the new ACA vice president. The seven at-large board seats were filled by Don Baker, Shilling Cadena, John Iacoletti, Lisa Mais, Shelley Roberts, Don Rhoades, and Joe Roades. We would like to thank outgoing board member Mike Swift for his service as ACA treasurer.

Offices of treasurer and secretary were filled at the May 10, 2009, ACA board meeting. John Iacoletti will be treasurer and Don Baker will serve again as secretary. These two officers will be confirmed by a vote of the membership at the June 7 lecture meeting.

If you have a question about how the ACA is run or you would like to see us do certain activities or projects, let a board member know.

The Value of Personal Meaning

—by Shilling Cadena

Consider a sentimental object. It may be a watch, a ring, or an old letter. Regardless of what the object is, there are two components to its value. First, there’s the objective value that is placed on the materials and function. Beyond that, though, there is the personal value attributed by one’s self. It is this second value that people cherish. Many will eschew a great deal of objective value in favor of sentiment. That is to say, I see no reason that this paradigm cannot extend well beyond objects to matters of purpose and the value of life itself. Atheists are often thought to be people for whom life has no value, as we do not often accept the given appraisals offered by religion. However, this hardly means we do not value life. It means only that we do not accept any intrinsic value didactically prescribed by superstition. While, to the theist, this may seem a depressing thought, it is one of the most liberating and enriching concepts available.

In the grand scheme, I am irrelevant. There is neither a single iota of significance nor a jot of true purpose to be found in me. I will die and be forgotten within a generation.

I am, though, a man of free conscience. I can arbitrarily place value by whim. The fact that others do not recognize such values does not make them unimportant; it makes them more important; it makes them personal importance. Not only can my life have value and purpose as I see fit, but I am free to change at any time. Sometimes I value knowledge, learning, and intellectual pursuit. On other occasions, I may consider my reason for living to be sexual debauchery and a good Cabernet.

The reason for living (or in the word of terms) the answer to the ultimate question of life, the universe, and everything is simply: whatever I damned well please it to be. The fact that all of these personal relevancies are ultimately worthless does nothing to diminish them. Rather, it strengthens them. Value isn’t the value, it’s my value; it is something all my own. I not only have the opportunity to live with and indulge in a purpose, but I get to determine it as well. I am the arbiter. I think that’s pretty cool.

A C A at the Pride Festival

—by Don Baker

ACA will be participating again in the Austin Gay and Lesbian Pride Festival on June 6. The festival will be at Republic Square Park starting at 4pm. The festival is shortened this year with the Pride Parade immediately following at 8pm. General admission is $5 this year.

ACA will have a booth at the Pride Festival to promote the organization, gather new members, and build bridges with the larger community. We will need a few volunteers for the booth, but we also encourage ACA members to attend the festival. Donations to the ACA to help defray our costs are also very welcome.

We hope to see you there!
How do you explain Christian martyrs? Why would anyone be willing to suffer or die for a claim if it wasn’t true?

In 1978, 909 members of the Peoples Temple Christian Church Full Gospel and their children committed “revolutionary suicide” in Jonestown, Guyana, by drinking a cyanide mix, because they believed international conspirators were coming to kill and torture them.

In 1997, 39 members of Heaven’s Gate committed suicide (2 more members killed themselves later) because they believed Earth was about to be “recycled” and that death was the only way to “survive” the process.

In the first half of 2000 it was estimated that the number of suicide bombers had reached an average of 180 annually (from 4.7 annually in the 1980s). The profile of the bomber has moved from weak military force member to jihadi—someone who believes he will receive a divine reward for his martyrdom.

According to the John Mack Institute, Harvard professor Dr. Mack was “subjected to widespread ridicule because of his work” (and apparent support of) people claiming to have been abducted by space aliens.

There is no limit to examples of people suffering or dying for claims they believe. That doesn’t mean the claims are “true.”
